MoNdAy FuNnIeS

I am a software tester. This has to be the best software/developer joke I ever heard. There always seems to be contention between the developers and the testers over who are the smartest, because the testers are constantly finding errors in the software (that's our job) and that makes the developers look bad.

So this one year the software testers and the software developers were all invited to go back to New York to a convention together to help them resolve this problem.

On the day they were all to get on the train, the developers showed up and they each had a ticket. The testers showed up and they only had one ticket. The developers all laughed and said they knew the testers could not all get to New York on one ticket. The testers said, "Watch and learn".

They all got on the train. Just before the conductor came to check the tickets, all the testers crowded into the men's bathroom. When the conductor came by he just knocked on the door and said, "Ticket please". They slid the one ticket under the door. The conductor punched it, slid it back under the door and went on his way.

Well they had a wonderful conference in New York but there was still some contention between the two groups over who was the smartest. When they got ready to board the train, the developers all showed up with only one ticket. But the testers showed up with no ticket. The developers laughed and said they knew they could not get home on the train without a ticket. The testers said, "Watch and learn".

So they all got on the train. When the look out said conductor was coming to get the tickets, the developers all crowded into the men's bathroom and locked the door. So the testers all crowded into the women's bathroom. Then just before the conductor arrived in the car one of the testers opened the women's bathroom door, knocked on the men's bathroom door and said, "Ticket please".

So there you have it !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Consumer Tips

This is not a VIRUS scare email that I want you to send to everyone you know.

It is just a copy of a security warning that I got at work and wanted to pass it along to you for your own information to help you protect your own computer.

SECURITY BULLETIN

A recent email worm, MIMAIL.C, has been spreading by using an attached .zip file purporting to be pictures, photos, movies, etc. Weve not historically blocked .zip files at the mail gateway, although I did block the original MIMAIL.C attachment, which is called photos.zip.

Well, this morning I got a new variant called MyMovie.zip, which Im sure is the same old junk in a different wrapper.

If you get any .zip files in your email of any kind from anyone you did not ask for or were not expecting, don't open them.
