Wisdom For The Week :

A LESSON IN PRIORITIES:

There was a country doctor at the turn of the century who was over worked and under paid. One day one of his friends learned that he had two prices that he charged for delivering a baby. $100 and $500.

His friend asked him how he decided which price to pay.

The old doctor said, "When I come out to tell the father the baby has arrived, if he first asks if it was a boy or a girl I charge him $500. But if he first asks how his wife is, then I charge him $100"

While filming a movie in New Mexico, Robert Redford was taking a break from the heat at an ice cream parlor. A woman - a huge fan of Redford's - noticed him, but was determined to keep her cool. She nonchalantly left the shop, pretending to not even notice him.

When she got outside, she realized she didn't have the ice cream cone she was sure she had paid for. She went back in and confronted the cashier.

Overhearing the conversation, Robert Redford said, "Madam, you'll probably find it where you put it - in your purse".
