Our attempt to help you smile every Monday Morning

I would like to dedicate this Monday Funnies to a very dear friend of ours who passed away a few weeks ago. Her name is Sandy Zarella. She is a friend who put cheer into the heart of everyone who knew her. Her and her husband Bill have had 25 wonderful years of life together some of which they shared with us. Seldom do any of us have a friend like Sandy. All of us who knew her can say we are better off for having known her, and oh how we will miss her. We send our love and our prayers to you Bill. Her memory and light will be with us, as with you, every single day.....

THREE WISE WOMEN ....

If the three wise men would have been the three wise women they would have

Made reservations, so there would be room for everyone at the inn

Asked directions

Arrived on time

Helped deliver the baby

Cleaned the stable

Made a casserole

Brought practical gifts

And there would be peace on earth by now.

Consumer Tips

Stef Burns asked how she could remove her kid's magic marker stain from linoleum flooring. I found this in the Readers Digest

bestCOOLstuff:

Kids' Friend: Need to remove crayon, grease or some unidentified gook from the wall - and fast? Try Mr. Clean Magic Eraser disposable pads ($2.19).

With everyone talking about the Target stores and the Salvation Army, I posted the following in a news group this morning in response to someone there who said they knew no one in the Salvation Army made over $100,000 a year. Did anyone else hear this report a couple of years ago about their CEO and how much he makes ? If you did and know the reference it would save me a lot of time searching...

My wife and I saw something on national TV a couple of years ago about the richest CEO's in America. On that show they said that the CEO of the Salvation Army makes 6 million a year. (Now I will have to go hunting and see if I can verify that story again). But I know it is not an Urban Legend because my wife I heard the report on one of the national news networks ourselves. So the Salvation Army is saying they will lose about 6 million this year from not having Target Store bell ringers, so our suggestion is that if the CEO really is making that much, they can get rid of him and those donations can go to the poor who actually need it from now on, then they will just break even. Anyone else see that report on TV about the richest CEOs in America a couple of years ago? Just wondering. Cordell Vail
