Wisdom For The Week :

There used to be an advertisement by the phone company where the jest of the ad was, "Reach Out And Touch Someone". I think that is not bad advice for any of us, every day of our lives.

MoNdAy FuNnIeS

I don't know if this is a true story but if it is not, it makes a good story anyway.

A few years ago in Ireland a father was trying to get his son to plow up the potatoe garden so they could plant the spring potatoes. The son did not want to do it and kept putting it off. Finally he could see that he could not put off his fathers insistance any longer. So he went to town and called his father on the phone. When he answered he said, Father, please don't tell anyone that I buried all the money form the resistance fund in our garden. That Father being quite astonished at that asked what he meant. He said to never mind just not tell anyone.

The next morning the british troops arrived at the small farm and dug up every part of the garden. They did not find any money so they just left.

When the son came home that night the Father asked what on earth that was all about and what he should do now. The son simply said, "Just go plant the potatoes. The garden is all dug up now".

Consumer Tips

Did you know that if you put too much salt in something you are cooking you can just put a few potatoes into with it while it is cooking and the potatoes will absorb the salt and "UN-FIX" the salt mistake you made
